This seven bay, two and a half story brick house faces southeast.

Built on fieldstone foundations, the house has a northeast two bay section and a southwest five bay section. The southwest section is original. The southeast elevation of the original house has Flemish-bonded brick work which has been painted red. The southwest and northwest walls are common bonded. The southeast front porch has a half hipped roof supported by six tapered columns. The porch is enclosed by a turned balustraded railing. The southeast (front) door is a wide wooden paneled door surmounted by a transom. The corner of the southeast elevation has a flight of ten stone steps flanked by a wrought iron handrailing. This door is glass and wooden paneled. The northwest door is wooden paneled.

There are two-over-two double-hung windows throughout the house except at the second level of the southeast level, original section, where there are nine-over-six double-hung windows.

There are two gable roofs covered by black asbestos shingles. There is a decorative cornice line at the northeast and southwest gable ends of the original house. There are interior end chimneys.

The southeast (front) door opens into a central hallway. An open string, single run stairway ascends from southeast to northwest along the southwest interior wall. The stairway has a slender turned newel post and square balusters. Southwest of the hall is the living room; to the northeast is the dining room and beyond that, also to the northeast, is the kitchen.

There are narrow hardwood floors, and plaster-over lath walls and ceilings. There is tongue-and-groove wainscoting in the hall and dining room. The dining room has a built-in cabinet northwest of the fireplace. There are molded door frame and wooden paneled doors. The windows along the southeast elevation, in the original section, are deeply recessed.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This substantial brick house was probably built by Joseph C. White about 1822-24 on the tract known as "Wolf's Cow". Joseph inherited land from his father, Benjamin White "of Benjamin", who had purchased over 36 acres of "Wolf's Cow" from his father-in-law, Joseph Newton Chiswell in 1798,¹ & 240 of "Albany" from Charles Clegget in 1790.² This portion of Wolf's Cow & the dwelling remain in the family, five generations later.

Benjamin White, a member of a prominent local family, left a will in 1822, leaving his son, Joseph, "the plantation where I now live", excepting the three acres for "William's tan yard". Joseph also inherited slaves Matildy, John, Peter and Henry.³ Joseph's descendants believe he built the house using bricks made on the property. The kitchen was in a separate, log building with upstairs sleeping quarters for slaves. A covered breezeway connected the two buildings.⁴ Joseph (1798-1886) married Mary Collinson Gott December 2, 1824, the daughter of Richard and Sarah Collinson Gott, Sr.⁵ Joseph willed the place to his son, John Collinson White. His remaining children had already received their shares of the inheritance. They were Richard G., Thomas Henry, and Susan Ann Dade, wife of Alexander Dade.⁶

John Collinson White (1833-1910) married Ann Ellen Grace Boteler. In 1862 he joined the Confederate Army, Company B, 35th Battalion, Virginia Cavalry. The battalion was commanded by his cousin, Lt. Col. Elijah Veirs White. John was captured by Union forces in 1863, and probably wounded, as he walked with a limp aided by a cane for the rest of his life.⁷

In 1911 John's heirs sold the farm, now amounting to 208.34 acres, to his youngest child, Eliza Virginia, and her husband, John William Moore.⁸ They made a number of changes, razing the old kitchen and slave quarters and adding a kitchen wing. At the same time the present porch was added, replacing a small, one-bay, original porch.⁹

In 1952 the property was deeded to the three Moore sons, William Hempstone Moore, Joseph Collinson Moore and John White Moore.¹⁰ In 1974 7.10 acres were portioned off for John White Moore and his wife, Kay.¹¹

At the present time the old house is occupied by tenants.
